"Synopsis Strahd rules Barovia with an iron hand, a vampire lord feasting on the blood of his vassals and torn from within by the sins of his past. In a war of undead versus undead, who will survive?' Autorenkommentar Back in the Saddle Again! This time the saddle was on a war horse as Strahd gears up to fight against his greatest enemy, Azalin the Lich. Strahd is a fascinating character to me; he may be evil, but still has a tattered sense of honor left to him--as well as a highly developed instinct for survival! Facing down a bad guy as powerful as Azalin was no picnic, even for the Lord of Barovia! I was greatly helped by Gene DeWeese, author of Lord of the Necropolis, which is Azalin's story. Gene not only provided me with encouragement, but a valuable timetable of Ravenloft events, and cheerfully consented to my lifting the scene of Strahd and Azalin's first meeting from his own book. My version told things with the exact same dialogue, but with Strahd's unique spin on the event. Gene and I both had a good chuckle over that one! This isn't the first time we've swapped stuff. In his book, Gene cleverly showed Azalin swiping a body out of Strahd's closet--something that has left Strahd mystified for centuries! Cheers, all."
