Completing the notion that "Men are from Mars, Women are from Venus", he adds "Children are from Heaven". Children Are From Heaven covers different skills of parenting to help improve communication, increase cooperation, and motivate your children. Central to this new approach are the five positive messages your children need to learn again and again. It's okay to be different. It's okay to make mistakes. It's okay to express negative emotions. It's okay to want more. It's okay to say no, but remember Mom and Dad are the bosses. When these messages are put into practice, and John Gray shows you how, your children will develop the necessary skills for successful living: forgiveness of others and themselves, sharing, delayed gratification, self-esteem, patience, persistence, respect for others and themselves, cooperation, compassion, confidence, and the ability to be happy. By applying the five messages and different skills of positive parenting, your children will receive what they need to become more cooperative, confident, and compassionate children.

There could hardly be a more charming or a more persuasive example of the new fabular cinema emerging from Iran than Majid Majidi's Children of Heaven, a vivid tale of a small brother and sister. Children of Heaven shares several traits with other Iranian movies I have seen, notably those by Abbas Kiarostami: a gentle, relaxed style; an almost poetic fascination with basic images such as fish swimming in a pool; and the use of numerous seemingly unimportant anecdotes to build a larger emotional picture. Children of Heaven is very nearly a perfect movie for children, and of course that means adults will like it too. It lacks the cynicism and smart-mouth attitudes of so much American entertainment for kids and glows with a kind of good-hearted purity. To see this movie is to be reminded of a time when the children in movies were children and not miniature stand-up comics. Children of Heaven continues the themes of the inheritance cycle by focusing on the courtiers of Rokugan, able to dominate political conflicts with ease. Also look for a new Crab Province that becomes stronger the more times it is attacked, a new Phoenix event that allows you to overwhelm your opponent with spells, and a Scorpion event that can dishonor multiple characters at once.
